

Minister Reilly salutes work of Townlink Construction

The newly fitted out Pharmaceutical Society of Ireland House was officially opened by Minister for Health James Reilly TD, at which he praised the professionalism of the Townlink Construction team who undertook the major renovation project of the building on Fenian Street in Dublin.

"At Townlink Construction, we were delighted to be there for the official opening and to see the success of the project," said T.J. Walsh, Managing Director of Townlink Construction.

"This project consisted of the stripping out of an existing office building and renovating the existing building to create offices with the highest modern energy efficient standards. Construction took place on an area of 1850m² over a 16 week period starting before Christmas. Despite this short time frame, the Townlink Construction team managed to complete the project on schedule."

Pictured (L-R) Glenn Nunan of GNCE Consulting Engineers, Gerry Murphy of Fitzgerald Kavanagh Architects, Minister for Health James Reilly, T.J Walsh of Townlink Construction and Geraldine Cahill of GNCE Consulting Engineers